AN ANNIVERSARY MEETING.

COMMEMORATING THE BATTLE OF LEXINGTON.

Daughters of the American Revolution Give a Fine Exhibit of Relics—The Gerry Collection—A Pleasant Tea.

The anniversary of the battle of Lexington was celebrated yesterday by the Mary Clap Wooster chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the parlors of the Church of the Redeemer, and also the second anniversary of the society's organization. The church parlors were beautifully decorated, being draped with flags and bunting. In one section were placed all the relics which were given to the society by the Gerry estate, and this was called the "Gerry Corner." The collection includes a picture of Elbridge Gerry, taken when he was vice president; an old fashion yarn winder, and a fan which belonged to the late Miss Gerry. In the center of the table containing these relics was placed the charter of the society, a most interesting document. The charter is encased in a frame made from wood from General Wooster's house and decorated with nails and bolts, which came out of the same building. A chair, which belonged to General Wooster, was also shown. Yesterday afternoon Horace Day presented the chapter with a gavel made of wood taken from the other house of General Wooster. Other relics were: A roster of a British officer on Staten Island by Captain Pitts Randolph of the New York troops; a large collection of tea pots, representing all the old styles; an ornamented vest button worn by General Washington, and a letter written by Benjamin Franklin, July 11, 1751, concerning the establishment of the University of Pennsylvania.

In a show case were exhibited various articles indicative of the early history of the country. There was a goblet which was brought from Holland by Peter Stuyvesant, the date on which is 1647; a musket ball which wounded Lieutenant A. M. Bradley, who was with General Wooster at Danbury during Tryon's invasion, April 27, 1777; a vinaigrette, owned by Mrs. Martha Sherman Bradley, a cousin of Roger Sherman; a Bible formerly owned by Hezekiah Brockett, and carried by him through the French and Revolutionary wars; a slipper worn by a lady at Washington's inaugural ball; the knee breeches worn by Dr. Enoch Munson, a surgeon in the Revolutionary war; and implements of warfare, such as swords and pistols used in the Revolutionary war and the civil war form an interesting relic.

Hanging upon the wall was displayed a shoe and part of the wedding dress of Madam Sarah Frye, wife of Colonel James Frye, and which was worn at a ball given in honor of Washington. A musket and powder horn carried by Stephen Newell in the Revolution, and used at Ticonderoga. The powder horn bears this inscription:

"May the blossom of liberty never fail, And the king and his tyrants never prevail."

A Bible, which belonged to Rev. Joseph Elliott, son of John Elliott; a sermon written by Stephen Dodge; a large number of curious coins, a chair once owned by George Washington, a chain owned by Governor Treat and the very one used by him when he discussed with Andrew at Hartford, October, 1857, the giving up of the charter granted by King Charles, and a chair owned by General Wolcott, also went to make up this most unique and interesting collection of relics.

At the afternoon meeting several short papers were read by members of the chapter, touching on matters of special interest to the society. At the conclusion of the afternoon session tea was served by Mrs. Champion and Mrs. Newcomb, dressed in old time costumes.

The parlors of the church were almost completely filled with the relics, about 600 specimens being shown.

Mrs. Susan Clark and Mrs. Governor Coffin, both members of the Middletown chapter, were present.

Last evening the exhibit was thrown open to the public, and large numbers availed themselves of the opportunity to see the fine collection.

Among the other donations to the society from the Gerry estate is a portrait of the late Miss Gerry, the first state regent, together with her signature.

Suits for Divorce.

Mrs. Ailing, wife of Dr. W. G. Ailing, the well known physician, residing at 310 Orange street, opposite the high school building, yesterday brought suit for divorce against her husband, Dr. Ailing, and for $12,000 alimony. The papers in the case were served by Deputy Sheriff Pond, and the property of the defendant was attached to cover the amount asked for.

The allegation of the complaint are that since her marriage she has been subject to intolerable cruelty.

Mrs. Ailing was formerly Miss Heppie J. Daniels, and at the time of her marriage was a nurse at the hospital. She married her present husband November 15, 1888.

Dr. Ailing had been previously married and soon after his acquaintance with his present wife his former wife sued him for a divorce, and the complainant in the present proceedings figured prominently in the case.

A divorce was granted the first wife and soon afterwards Dr. Ailing married his present wife.

The news that divorce proceedings had been brought created some surprise yesterday, for it had been supposed by those acquainted with Dr. and Mrs. Ailing that they were upon the best of terms, and the first intimation friends had that such was not the case came in the announcement of the present proceedings.

Dr. Ailing is well known in this city and has an extensive practice.
